Phoenix in the Fall

October in Phoenix is a time of year filled with excitement and activities that cater to various interests. From outdoor adventures to cultural experiences, the city's vibrant attractions invite visitors to explore and enjoy the beautiful fall weather.

Whether you're hiking Camelback Mountain, enjoying the allure of the Desert Botanical Garden, or immersing yourself in local culture at a festival, there's no shortage of memorable experiences. October offers something for everyone.

Attend the Arizona State Fair—October 1st thru November 1st

The Arizona State Fair is a beloved tradition in Phoenix every October. It offers a great mix of entertainment, delicious food, and thrilling rides. From exhilarating carnival rides to live concerts, there's something for everyone to enjoy.

Visitors can indulge in classic fair foods such as deep-fried treats, corndogs, and sweet funnel cakes. The fair also features local vendors selling unique crafts and products, promising an authentic Arizona experience. It's a great place to shop for handmade goods while supporting local artisans.

Live performances are a highlight, featuring local bands and national acts that will have you dancing in your seat. Each day brings different entertainment, so check the schedule to catch your favorite acts.

The fair atmosphere is lively and fun, perfect for families and friends alike. Enjoy games, contests, and even livestock displays—an essential part of the fair's charm.

Don't miss the chance to create lasting memories at the Arizona State Fair this October. It's a celebration of community, food, and fun under the beautiful Phoenix sky.

Address: 1826 W McDowell Rd, Phoenix, AZ 85007.

Experience the Fear Farm Haunted House—September 19th thru November 14th

If you're looking for thrills and chills this October, a visit to Fear Farm is a must. This haunted house attraction transforms into a spooky spectacle every fall. Located in Phoenix, it promises a unique experience filled with scares and surprises.

Fear Farm features various themed haunted attractions, each designed to send shivers down your spine. You can navigate the haunted corn maze, encounter terrifying creatures, and explore creepy old structures. It's a great spot for friends looking to enjoy a night of fright.

The atmosphere is electrifying, especially at night when the spooky decorations and sound effects heighten the excitement. Be prepared for jump scares and elaborate storytelling that will keep you on the edge of your seat.

Food vendors are available, providing tasty snacks to refuel after a night of scares. Fear Farm is designed to get your adrenaline pumping, making unforgettable memories every Halloween season. Don't miss the fun this October!

Enjoy Rocktober Fest Celebrating Beer and Live Music

Rocktober Fest is an exciting event in Phoenix that pairs great beer with fantastic music. Held in October, this lively festival celebrates local breweries and features live performances by various bands. It's perfect for beer lovers and music enthusiasts alike.

Attendees can sample craft beers from many local breweries, each showcasing their best brews. From IPAs to stouts, there's a variety of options to please all palates. The beer tasting experience paired with delicious food vendors enhances the festive atmosphere.

Throughout the day, live music fills the air, creating a fun and enjoyable environment. Local bands take the stage, offering captivating performances that keep the energy up. Rocktober Fest also features games and competitions to keep everyone entertained. Whether you're in it for the beer, music, or the vibrant atmosphere, there is something for everyone.

Keep Your Dogs and Cats Safe From Holiday Hazards

Happy holidays? Not if your pet gets sick. The Food and Drug Administration's Center for Veterinary Medicine discusses some unhealthy holiday temptations and how to keep your pets safe.

Stocking Stuffers and Pet Treats

If your dog received a stocking full of pet treats, make sure he doesn't gobble them all up at once, making them hard to digest. Unchewed pet treats can get stuck in the trachea (windpipe) or gastrointestinal tract (esophagus, stomach, and intestines).

If your dog is in obvious distress from eating too much too fast, call your veterinarian immediately. Some telltale signs are drooling, choking, or vomiting.

Take note of timing. If a bone or chew toy lodges in your dog's stomach or intestines, the symptoms might not be immediate. Hours to days later, he may vomit and have diarrhea, be less active, not want to eat, and have stomach pain. If the blockage stays there too long, your dog may become very ill.

When in doubt, call your veterinarian, who may need to take x-rays, use an endoscope (a medical device with a special camera that can see inside the throat, stomach, and intestines), or even do abdominal surgery to see what and where the problem is and remove any pieces of bone or chew toy that are causing the blockage.

Tinsel and Ribbons

Decorating your tree? Wrapping or unwrapping gifts? Keep a close eye on where you leave leftover tinsel, string, and ribbons.

Your cat or dog may find these decorations irresistible because they look like easy-to-catch, sparkly, and wiggly prey. In fact, they can cause serious stomach and intestinal damage.

Play it safe by keeping tinsel off the tree and collecting all ribbons and string after gifts are opened.

Holiday Plants

If you have holiday plants such as poinsettias, mistletoe, or holly around, take care. When you display (or dispose of) these plants, your cat or dog may decide they're good to eat.

Take poinsettias, which can irritate your pet's mouth and stomach and may cause drooling, vomiting, and diarrhea. If your pet eats poinsettia leaves, you can help by picking up the food and water dishes for a couple of hours to let your pet's stomach settle. Fortunately, severe mistletoe toxicity is uncommon and usually occurs only if your pet eats a large amount. Symptoms include vomiting and diarrhea, difficulty breathing, slowed heart rate, low blood pressure, and odd behavior.

Even though holly berries and leaves aren't very harmful, they can still make your pet ill and you should prevent your pets from eating them. In both dogs and cats, the plant's toxins can cause drooling, vomiting, diarrhea, loss of appetite, and decreased activity. Not to mention, the spikey leaves could hurt your pet's mouth.
