Waterfront Park is Here

This summer, Seattle's new waterfront invites you to step into something historic.

After decades of dreaming, planning and community input, Waterfront Park is coming to life – not just as a park, but as a civic space shaped by culture, community, and care. From May through September, Friends of Waterfront Park will host over 270 free public events as part of a season-long celebration leading up to the much-anticipated Grand Opening Celebration in late summer 2025.

A Season Full of Celebration

It all kicks off Saturday, May 31, with the Meet Me at Waterfront Park 5K and Community Celebration, presented by Brooks Running. Run, walk, or roll across your new park and help set the tone for a season of movement, memory-making, and joy.

All summer long, Spotlight at Waterfront Park brings weekly performances that are windows into the soul of the city. Creatives are showcased through music, dance, and storytelling curated by partners like Black and Loud Fest, Daybreak Star, Brasil in Motion, and The Residency.

Beyond weekly performances, the season is also marked by cultural festivals and highlights that celebrate identity, honor resilience, and create space for communities to gather in joy, pride and remembrance.

It all leads to the Grand Opening Celebration of Waterfront Park later this year when Pier 58 is completed and the full 20-acre vision is realized.

Some of the Best Summer Vacations To Consider in 2025

Summer is a popular time to travel. Schools are out, the days are longer, and warmer weather (in some places around the world) allows for beach trips plus a variety of more adventurous outdoor activities—whether it's hiking through the Dolomites or fly fishing in Montana.

If you're planning a vacation for June, July, or August and searching for some inspiration, you've come to the right place. With the help of a few travel advisors, we put together a list of the best summer vacations everyone should consider in 2025. Below, you'll find ideas for both domestic and international trips that are sure to create memories that will last well beyond the end of summer.

Enjoy a quiet getaway in Menorca.

While Ibiza is known for its nightlife, relaxation is paramount in Menorca, the quieter of Spain's Balearic Islands. "Menorca is a wonderful destination for travelers seeking a natural rugged coastline, a sustainable food movement, and a wellness focus," says Aimee Suthann, owner of Truly Connected Travel. "This island is a great fit for large groups to rent a renovated farmhouse or a honeymooning couple who wants to retreat to their room, away from the crowds." If you fall in the latter category, book a suite at Son Vell, a 450-acre estate where you can cool off in two outdoor swimming pools or the blue waters of the property's own cala (cove).

Escape to the British seaside in Cornwall.

England isn't typically the first country to come to mind when you think of wide, sandy beaches and bright blue water, but summertime in Cornwall is magical. While St. Ives is wildly popular, this part of the country is filled with dozens of other small villages and towns, all within driving distance of the region's dramatic coastlines and turquoise waters. Fill your days by swimming and sunbathing on Gyllyngvase Beach, Great Western Beach, or Porthcurno Beach, and eating freshly caught seafood for every meal.

Take a group trip to North Carolina's Crystal Coast.

According to Jen Curran, owner of Archipelagos Travel Design, group trips and slow travel continue to be popular choices among travelers this year. To pair the two trends together, pencil in a week for a vacation on North Carolina's Crystal Coast, an 85-mile stretch of coastline with 56 miles of protected beaches. "Our travelers want to really sink in to get a real sense of place," she explains. And you can do just that by renting a beachfront house in Emerald Isle or Atlantic Beach and paddleboarding, biking, and relaxing by the sea.
